Length 6⅛ in., 15.5 cm

PROVENANCE

Collection of Pauline B. (1910-2000) and Myron S. (1906-1992) Falk, Jr., no. 542.
Christie's New York, 16th October 2001, lot 175.
J.J. Lally and Co., New York.

EXHIBITION

Traders on China's Northern Frontier, Arthur M. Sackler Gallery, Washington D.C., 1995, cat. no. 18.

CATALOGUE NOTE

Representations of human faces are rarely seen among archaic Chinese bronzes. A group of four similar ornaments was excavated from a 14th -13th century B.C. site at Liujiahe, Pinggu Xian, near Beijing and published in Wenwu, 1977, vol. 11, p. 6, fig. 15. Further face-shaped ornaments were uncovered in Laoniucun, outside Xi'an, also published in Wenwu, 1988, vol. 6, pp 13-14, figs 21.1 and 22. Jenny So notes that the related ornaments have small holes, indicating that they were sewn onto garments as adornments, and suggests that the present piece may also have been used as a luxurious accessory (for further detail, see Traders on China's Northern Frontier, Arthur M. Sackler Gallery, Washington D.C., 1995, cat. no. 18).

CONDITION REPORT

In general good condition. Each side is missing one spike. The masks with minute touch ups to the edges and one mask with a small loss to the jaw.

整體品相良好。一側均見一釘缺失。兩側人面邊沿見極輕微補，一側人面下顎見一小缺。

Collection of Sir Neill Malcolm K.C.B., D.S.O. (1869-1953).
Collection of Captain Dugald Malcolm C.M.G., C.V.O., T.D. (1917-2000).
Sotheby's London, 29th March 1977, lot 35.

Both Pairs:
J.T. Tai, New York.
Offered at Sotheby's New York, 22nd March 2011, lot 40.

EXHIBITION

One Pair:
Exhibition of Early Chinese Bronzes, Oriental Ceramic Society, London, 1951, cat. no. 79.

LITERATURE

One Pair:
W. Percival Yetts, 'Notes on Some Chinese Bronzes,' Transactions of the Oriental Ceramic Society, vol. 19, London, 1942-1943, pp 55-56, pl. 22.
William Watson, Cultural Frontiers in Ancient East Asia, Edinburgh, 1971, pls 44a-b.

CATALOGUE NOTE

During the Zhou dynasty, chariots were vital for military warfare, and those of the elite were fitted with ornate finials and attachments. Referred to as tiger-heads or tiger-dragons, the ferocious feline aspect of the beast-form fittings convey power and would have been suitable ornamentation for a chariot. In his description, Watson identifies the present pair as cheek-pieces and among the earliest surviving examples of bridle bits, noting that the distinctive wide loop attachments were a Chinese innovation to secure the bit which, unlike Near Eastern fittings, were not fixed but rather inserted or tied into place (see William Watson, Cultural Frontiers in Ancient East Asia, Edinburgh, 1971, p. 65).

A related set of four is in the Arthur M. Sackler Museum, Harvard University, Cambridge (accession nos 1943.52.27.a,b,c,d). Another closely related pair is published in Maxwell K. Hearn, Ancient Chinese Art: The Ernest Erickson Collection in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, 1987, nos 43 and 44. See also a group of five in the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, illustrated in Sueji Umehara, Shina Kodo Seiwa / Selected Relics of Ancient Chinese Bronzes from Collections in Europe and America, part. III, vol. II, Osaka, 1933, pl. 115.

CONDITION REPORT

All four fittings with characteristic wear, surface encrustation, and small losses due to age and corrosion; the most prominent being an approx. 2.5 cm section of loss along the bottom edge of one.

四件面飾均帶典型磨痕、表面銅鏽及由於年份及腐蝕產生的輕微小失，最突出一處近底部邊緣，約2.5公分。

DESCRIPTION

stand (2)

Height 2⅞ in., 7.3 cm

PROVENANCE

Collection of Mr. Samuel H. Minkenhof (1879-1956).
Collection of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan B. (1904-1978) Hart.
Christie's New York, 2nd December 1993, lot 197 (part lot).
Collection of Hugo Munsterberg (1918-1996).

EXHIBITION

Ancient Chinese Bronze Vessels, Gilt Bronzes and Sculptures; Two Private Collections, One Formerly Part of the Minkenhof Collection, Eskenazi Ltd., London, 1977, cat. no. 20.

LITERATURE

Hugo Munsterberg, Chinese Buddhist Bronzes, Tokyo, 1967, pl. 90.

CATALOGUE NOTE

The present figure is a fine example of the rounded volumes and convincing suggestion of body weight and movement characteristic of the Tang-dynasty sculptural style. Well cast with the dramatic swayed-hip posture and exaggerated physical features meant to frighten sickness and evil spirits away, the present lokapala would originally have formed part of a portable votive altar set.

Compare a related series of four small gilt-bronze lokapala figures, illustrated in Matsubara Saburo, Chinese Buddhist Sculpture, Tokyo, 1996, pl. 254a-d; and one cast with a long club-vajra, excavated from Xi'an in Hebei province, ibid., p. 297, fig. 264. See also a closely related Tang dynasty gilt-bronze lokapala sold in these rooms, 16th September 2009, lot 123.

CONDITION REPORT

There is some rubbing and loss of detail, but, overall, the figure and its gilding are preserved in good condition.

A yellow silk embroidered 'dragon' banner, Qing dynasty, 19th century

Estimate:6,000 - 8,000 USD

GP New York Gantry Point Warehouse

DESCRIPTION

Height 71 in., 180.5 cm; Width 69¼ in., 176 cm

CATALOGUE NOTE

Along with canopies and standards, colorful silk banners formed part of imperial regalia in the large audiences, ceremonies, and parades that took place at the Qing court. Triangular banners with serrated edges can be seen in paintings dating back to the Tang dynasty, and persisted throughout the history of imperial China. For Qing court paintings depicting banners similar to the present, compare three illustrated in The Complete Collection of the Treasures of the Palace Museum. Paintings by Court Artists of the Qing Court, Hong Kong, 1996, pls 34, 58, and 68. A yellow-ground Xianfeng period example embroidered with a blue dragon sold in our London rooms, 17th May 2019, lot 430.

For slightly earlier 18th century 'dragon' military banners, see a green-ground example illustrated in John E. Vollmer, Silks for Thrones and Altars: Chinese Costumes and Textiles, Paris, 2004, pl. 35; a white-ground pair published in Robert D. Jacobsen, Imperial Silks: Ch'ing Dynasty Textiles in The Minneapolis Institute of Arts, vol. II, Minneapolis, 2000, pls 492 and 493, and a red-ground banner included in John E. Vollmer and Jacqueline Simcox, Emblems of Empire: Selections from the Mactaggart Art Collection, Edmonton, 2009, p. 160.

CONDITION REPORT

A few scattered tears, fraying, and faint staining to the yellow ground and edges, otherwise the embroidery is in good condition.
